Description

Benelli Imperiale and Squire SB1 Sidecar Watsonian Squire have developed a simple sidecar outfit that is ideal for motorcyclists to get their first taste of life on three wheels. Production costs have been minimised by simplifying the sidecar build process and pairing it with a specific motorcycle, which makes fitting at the factory quicker and easier. The development team picked the Benelli Imperiale 400 to power the outfit, because its air-cooled single cylinder engine is reliable and produces sufficient torque to propel a lightweight sidecar. Named the SB1, the sidecar body features the familiar octagonal nose of the Watsonian Grand Prix range. It is moulded in the UK from GRP fibreglass, with a tough gloss black gelcoat finish. Instead of a screen, there is a GRP wind deflector and the passenger sits in a bucket seat, also made from GRP, with an upholstered cushion in black vinyl. It sits on a newly designed platform chassis, made from powder-coated tubular steel for strength and longevity. Rubber torsion suspension and a 10” steel wheel provide a smooth ride.
