Description

CMC Motorcycles is pleased to offer the 2003 Suzuki GSX1400 — a muscular retro roadster that combines classic styling with immense low-end torque and the smooth power delivery of a large-capacity inline-four engine. Built as Suzuki's answer to the growing muscle bike market of the early 2000s, the GSX1400 delivers effortless performance and a strong road presence with old-school character. At the heart of the GSX1400 is a 1,402cc air/oil-cooled DOHC inline-four engine. The engine is tuned for strong low and mid-range performance rather than high-revving peak power, giving the bike immense pulling power and smooth acceleration from almost any speed. Its relaxed, torque-heavy nature makes it particularly enjoyable for road riding and effortless cruising. Despite its size and weight, the bike handles predictably and confidently, especially on sweeping roads where its torque-rich engine can really be enjoyed. The setup is designed to balance comfort with stability, complementing the bike's muscle-bike character and allowing it to handle both relaxed touring and spirited riding. Braking performance is strong for its era, with dual front discs and six-piston Tokico calipers delivering solid stopping power, supported by a rear disc brake. The braking setup gives the GSX1400 reassuring control considering its substantial torque and weight. Ergonomically, the GSX1400 features a comfortable upright riding position with wide handlebars. This creates a relaxed and commanding riding stance that works well for both shorter journeys and longer rides. Styling is heavily inspired by classic superbikes of the late 1970s and early 1980s, with a large fuel tank, exposed engine, twin rear shocks and round headlight giving it a timeless retro-muscle appearance. The GSX1400 has become increasingly appreciated for combining traditional styling with
